

STAR MERKABA

The model of the star of MERKABA creates immediate resonance and activation of ones own Merkaba, and strengthens the connection in meditation and prayer

Based on Holy Geometry

GEOTRANSMITTERS are not only receivers and senders, but also connectors, because they are based on sacred geometry and therefore the foundation of creation.

Since the dawn of history, the shape of the MERKABA (star-tetrahedron made out of 2 tetrahedrons) has had a strong meaning and effect on humans. This is because it is so to say the vehicle of creation.

The easiest way to define a MERKABA is that it is an energy field, which formed as a star tetrahedron surrounds every life form. This geometrical light body is in constant rotation and connects our inner aspects with the God.

The symbolism of this structure is the absolute and harmonious connection of the two polaric streams in the cosmos. Only when the two are united, we are strengthened by a balanced, connected, and harmonious energy field that keeps us healthy.

Measurements

- Height tip to tip 21 cm, side length 17 cm
- Diameter of the sticks 3 mm
- (3 and 21 are also numbers of the Fibonacci sequence and are based on the spiral of the golden cut).

Research, production, and distribution of Geotransmitters for transferring vibration and energy.
The name Geotransmitter is based on sacred geometry and comes from the latin word 'transmittere' for receiving, transferring, and sending, as well as the English word for sender, converter, and transformer.

All of our Geo-Transmitters are based on sacred geometry, the 5 platonic bodies and numbers of the Fibonacci sequence. They were produced in specific measurements and selected materials, and create subtle and energetic resonance fields, which are then utilizable for humans.

Sacred Geometry

Following vibration and frequency, space and dimension, light and color, tone and sound (finde diese differenzierung im englischen nicht), it needs a 5th counterpart to complete the material creation. Because for the manifestation of all there is, it needs sacred geometry, which carries the numbers of mathematics in it. Sacred geometry is also called the secret, hidden or hermetic geometry, as it shows what lies behind the physical existence of the universe.

The 5 Platonic Bodies*

Ultimately, there are only 5 geometric bodies within any physical existence, which underlie everything: the cube, tetrahedron, octahedron, dodecahedron, and icosahedron. The platonic bodies together constitute all basic forms, on which the structure of sacred geometry and creation are built on. Because all forms in our material world and creation are composed of one of these forms or their compounds. They are the basis of all manifestations, the atoms and crystals, the elements as well as cell structures of every living organism. Thus platonic bodies form the foundation of creation, on which everything was manifested, and allow through the connection of all the foundations of creation the manifestation of everything that we perceive around us.

Platonic bodies exhibit the following fundamental features:

- Equal edge length
- Which are confined by equally sized areas
- Equal inner angles between the areas
- In a sphere, all corner-points touch the inside of the surface

Comment:

*They are called "platonic bodies" because the Greek philosopher Plato was the one who showed their true cohesion and interpretation. He describes the universal cosmology in his opus Timaios, which he based on connected geometrical structures. However, the knowledge that these 5 geometrical bodies are the foundation of the universe, was known long before Plato. In the Ashmolean museum in Oxford, one can find models of platonic bodies that are dated 3400 years old, which means 1000 years before Plato. And there are precise-made models of crystals in the museum in Cairo, which are dated 3000 years old.

History

When we follow the dimensional metaphysical process, and transform the 2 dimensional six-star into 3 dimensionality, we recognize the Merkaba (the star of life, see image).

The six-star in its 2 dimensional image, often mistakenly called "Jewish star", was already used by the biblical king David. However, the symbol is much older and appears in almost all old cultures on almost all continents – especially in the original peoples (also interesting in this context is the drawing of Leonardo Da Vinci with the human inside the Merkaba and in the golden ratio (see image). Also the term "Mer-Ka-Ba" appears in many different scripts and languages and always has the same meaning. In English language it is pronounced in the same way as in Aramaic or even Zulu (who believe that their people were brought from universe to earth in a Merkaba). In Hebrew it is called Mer-Ka-Vah, which means throne of God as well as vehicle, which carries the human body and spirit from one place to another. In ancient Egypt (hier hab ich es ancient Egyptian statt nur Egyptian genannt wie es im deutschen steht) the world "Mer-Ka-Ba" is composed of three words: Mer is a special kind of light contra-rotating light field; Ka means spirit (or on earth human spirit), and Ba means interpretation of reality, which refers to the human body. When these words are assembled analogously, the Merkaba is understood as "a contra-rotating light field, which is in interaction and brings together spirit and body from one world to another". However, it is much more than that. It is part of our matrix and one of the patterns of creation, which has brought everything that is into existence.

Area of Application of the MERKABA

The star of the Merkaba energizes and harmonizes your spiritual aspects in a tender and caring way.

To meditate, you hang the Merkaba ca. 30 cm above your head and sit under it. Imagine you are sitting in a tetrahedron of light, which is fully embracing you. The star of the Merkaba strongly supports meditation of all kind, especially in light-body meditations. The Merkaba structure harmonizes gently and permanently the subtle connection of the cognitive-spiritual level.

For prayer, sit under the star of the Merkaba and you will be able to perceive the connections and resonances clearer.

When the star of the Merkaba is hung in living and working spaces, it creates an energy field, which harmonizes the spiritual aspects of present people.
